Store Robbed And Car Stolen Friday

A. H. Clement's Car Recovered In James River, Thieves Not Found

A. H. Clement's Chevrolet sedan was stolen from in front of his house, and W. R. Reynold's store was broken into and robbed last Friday night sometime after one o'clock.

Mr. Clement's care was found Saturday afternoon in the James River, entirely submerged except for the rear end including the license plate, about a mile from the viaduct on the north side of the road going into Lynchburg. It had been pushed off a sand bar, evidently in an attempt to dispose of it, but the engine being the heaviest part, pulled the front of the car down into the river, leaving the rear out of the water.

The robberst broke into Reynold's store, and attempted to open the safe, considerably damaging it by hammering at the dial with an axe, but they were not successful. They carried away merchandise, mostly men's clothing, which is estimated to have been worth around $50.

It is believed that the robbery was performed by amateurs, and that they were frightened away from the store for they made no effort to cover up their traces. Several empty shoe boxes were left out on the counters, and also empty shirt boxes. Before leaving, they ate a lunch for empty coca-cola bottles, and banana skins, were found strewn around the store.

As yet no tract of the thieves has been found, although the Lynchburg police are working on the case.

Average Virginian's Income Is $400 According To Survey

Richmond, Va., Dec. 11—The average spendable money income of the citizen of Virginia is $400 a year, according to an exhaustive study of the buying power of the people of the United States, just completed by the magazine Sales Management, and released recently through the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce for newspaper publication. The figures given are compiled on a basis of the 1930 census of population, which credits Virginia with 2,418,975 inhabitants, and 1929 compilations of figures on numbers of industrial and farm workers, incomes, etc., the closest available figures for comparison.

The compilation shows 61,125 Virginians had incomes of $1,000 to $5,000, and 7,677 incomes of more than $5,000; or 68,802 with incomes of more than $1,000. It credits industry with producing $817,814,000 of all spendable money income, and agriculture with $150,183,000. Virginia is credited with having 262,541 automobiles in use which cost less than $1,000 and 66,463 which cost more than this figure. The figures are worked out by counties, showing a range of spendable money income per capita which runs from $781 per capita in Newport News and Warwick County, to $128 in Rockbridge County.

Richmond and Henrico County with 2,436 incomes of over $5,000 and the largest total in this classification in the state. The only other community having over 1,000 incomes of more than $5,000 a year was Norfolk and Portsmouth and Norfolk County, grouped together, with 1,292.

The all spendable money incomes listed for some of the Virginia cities and the counties with which they are grouped in the classification, follow: Warwick and Newport News $781 per capita, Roanoke and Roanoke County, $568 per capita; Norfolk-Portsmouth and Norfolk County $736, Lynchburg and Campbell County, $618; Petersburg and Dinwiddie, $607; Richmond, $757.

Counties listed as having spendable money incomes of over $500 per capita, with the exceptions of those given above include: Albemarle, $640; Alleghany, $596; Arlington, $63 Northampton, $643.

The compilations by which the figures were determined are being given careful study by the research department of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce in an effort to arrive at a conclusion as to their value.

Price of Extension Division Writes On Signing of Marketing Contracts

"When the tobacco markets opened in Virginia in the fall of 1929 and it appeared that in spite of a high average crop the price would be very low, the farmers throughout the Virginia tobacco belt communicated with the extension division and the Federal Farm Board in an effort to find out what could be done to better conditions, and as a result of these communications and several conferences, a mass meeting of Virginia tobacco growers was called in Danville, E. R. Price of the Extension Division Division, Blacksburg, writes.

"James C. Stone, of the Federal Farm Board, addressed this meeting and told the growers just what they would have to do in order to receive assistance from the Federal Farm Board. After hearing Mr. Stone's talk and discussing the situation at length among themselves, the growers present agreed to ask the extension division and the Farm Board to cooperate with them in putting on a very intensive educational campaign throughout every county in the Virginia tobacco belt for the purpose of thoroughly acquainting the tobacco growers and other business men with the whole situation.

"The Federal Farm Board and the extension division complied with this request and early in the year employed W. S. Green to take charge of this educational campaign. Mr. Green went to work immediately and with the help of the county agents, the teachers of vocational agriculure and some of the leading farmers and business men put on a series of six meetings in one hundred different communities in the tobacco belt. At these meeting the following subjects were discussed:

1. How the Farm Board can help the tobacco grower.
2. The 1930 tobacco outlook and the relation between it and the 1929 crop.
3. What is wrong with tobacco farming and what can be done about it.
4. How may a cooperative marketing association help the tobacco farmer.

Lessons learned from the Tri-State Association.

"After five meetings had been held in each community for discussion of the above subjects, the farmers present then voted as to whether they wanted to work out a contract for a new marketing association. At each of the one hundred points a majority of the farmers present voted in the affirmative and then proceeded to say what they wanted in the new contract. These suggestions were further considered at a county meeting and a state meeting representative tobacco growers and with the assistance of the Federal Farm Board a new marketing contract was finally developed.

"This contract was very similar to the new cooperative marketing contract worked out by the South Carolina tobacco growers, but contained a number of safeguards and special considerations suggested by Virginia farmers. Chief among these was a clause that the association should not begin operation until a mass meeting of signers had been held at which mass meeting the growers themselves decided by a majority vote whether sufficient tobacco had been signed up to justify efficient operations if, in the opinion of the growers, sufficient tobacco had been signed up by July 20, 1930 the association would attempt to handle the 1930 crop but if, in the opinion of the organization committee, a sufficient amount had not been signed up by that time, a mass meeting vote would be taken around March 15, 1931 to determine whether the association would handle the 1931 crop. If the association wanted to handle the 1932 crop. In other words, matters were arranged so that following the educational campaign, tobacco growers could begin the contract and could start active operation of an association anytime within the next two years provided the organization committee, the Farm Board and the farmers themselves thought conditions justified successful operation.

"As might have been expected, very few farmers signed the marketing contract during the first few months, but when the markets opened in 1930 and the prices were lower than they had been in the last twenty-five years, farmers who had attended the educational meetings in the spring and helped work out the new contract immediately became active. The had another meeting of the organization committee and asked the Farm Board to assign them a man to assist with an active sign-up campaign. This campaign has now been going on for three or four weeks and some five hundred farmers have already signed the contract, No "balyhoo" methods are being followed; but the tobacco growers of Virginia are quietly making a house to house canvass and talking the situation over with their neighbor. No one is being unduly urged to sign the contract by the facts are being placed before all tobacco

Tom Christian Has Chance Of Recovery

Brother of Dr. Christian Struck By Car; Robbery Report Now Thought False

Tom Christian, of Covington, former resident of Appomattox and brother of Dr. D. J. Christian, found on the highway near Clifton Forge Friday in a dying condition was thought to be better this morning and have a chance of recovery.

Mr. Christian was going toward Covington at the time he was injured. According to latest reports, he had driven his car to the side of the road to adjust the bumper which had been dragging, when a passing car struck him, without stopping. Early reports that he had been robbed are without foundation.

Mr. Christian was left considerably skinned and bruised about the face and a gas form of blood poisoning developed in an injured leg making it necessary to amputate it above the knee. He is in a Roanoke hospital where he was taken immediately after the accident.

He was unconscious for three days after the accident, and though he has been conscious since Tuesday, he has been too ill to discuss the accident. He was given blood infusions Wednesday. Ned Hancock gave his blood which had already been tested and found to match. Mr. Hancock was accompanied to Roanoke by Herbert Pulliam, Eyland Mann, andPaul Drinkard.

Information received here immediately after the accident stating that Mr. Christian had been held up on the road between Roanoke and Covington, has not been substantiated.

He was found by a sheriff and taken to the hospital in Clifton Forge. No clue has been found to lead to the guilty party who struck him.

Mr. Christian lived in Appomattox all his life until recently he went to Covington, where he is engaged in the automobile business. His wife is the daughter of Carey Carson of this county.

Farmers Asked To Send Seeds Early

A request has been issued from the state department of agriculture and immigration asking farmers to send their seed which they want cleaned and treated to the department during the month of December.

The department will render this service as in previous years but samples which are not received until after December cannot be taken care of promptly.

The Best

Let me but do my work from day to day,
In field or forest, at the desk or loom,
In roaring market place or tranquil room;
Let me but find it in my heart to say,
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray,
"This is my work, my bless ing, not my doom;
Of all who live, I am only one by whom
This work can best be done in the right way."
Then shall I see it not too great or small
To suit my spirit and to prove my powers;
Then shall I cheerfully greet the laboring hours,
And cheerful turn, when the long shadows fall
At evenide, to play and love and rest,
Because I know for me my work is best.
